

Change in Departments

ROAD BODY, BANKING AND FARM DEPARTMENTS HIT

Urged in Macon Platform

Macon, Ga., October 14.—(P)—Removal of the state highway department from politics was urged by the democratic state convention today in its platform. The convention also recommended that members of the department be ineligible to elective office until a substantial period had elapsed after expiration of the terms of office on the highway board. The platform also urged the executive to investigate the cause of the recent failure of banks in Georgia and for him to take action if he can locate the responsibility. That section of the platform referring to the state highway department follows: "The highway department should be removed from politics and made the best business organization that it is possible to construct. The large amount of money handled and expended by this department demand that this be speedily done. The distribution of road money or mileage on any other basis than absolute merit of the projects and to the favor of some sections as against others is a possibility under the present arrangement that should be remedied.

Urges Reorganization. "We urge such a reorganization of this department as to bring about reforms and insure the selection of the executive head of this department from among the best business talent of the state and that the member of the highway board shall be eligible to elective office until after a substantial period from the expiration of his term of office on that board."

Another section of the platform reads: "We here make mention of the failure of a large number of our banks in our state during the present year. We urge upon our executive that he make earnest investigation of the cause of the recent calamity in banking and if the laws as they stand at present are sufficient for him to locate the responsibility that he take action and if the laws are not such as to enable him to handle the situation, that he make recommendations to the legislature which may in so far as possible provide against future calamities such as this, and to protect not only the banks and banking, but also the depositors and others doing business with them."

After a discussion of the department it was stated that "it would not unduly urge remedial legislation as to the above departments, we recommend that every department of our state government be brought under strict business review by our executive and general assembly, so that any such change or revision or reorganization as to any of them be made as will guarantee to the people the best service therein."

"Comprehensive consideration of our entire tax system" was commended to the lawmaking authorities, "to end that such tax laws be enacted as to place the burden of our government equitably on all classes of our people and on all classes of property."

Watch Finances. The platform, after felicitating the people of Georgia upon the prospects of a business administration, declares that "a business administration would seem to properly start with reviewing the recommendations of the state auditor with regard to the state's finances."

"That official," says the platform, "points out that there are over 70 general collecting agencies or groups handling the state's money. These agencies pay this money into different departments, and the state auditor says, whereas the state's taxes going to the state treasurer amount to $11,000,000, there are more than $22,000,000 collected all told, and that there is no way to check up on the total. We recommend therefore at the outset that the state should have a financial department for its own affairs operated by the state treasurer, and that all the income and outgo should be handled through this department under proper vouchers."

The platform expresses the opinion that "the political power of the agricultural department should be stripped from that organization and that it should be so organized in its every detail as to insure that the agricultural interests of Georgia will receive every possible attention and benefit from the operation of this department to which these interests are rightfully entitled."

Following is the good roads plank: "This convention commits itself to a speedy completion of Georgia state aid roads system connecting up the sites of the various counties, through the weakest as well as the strongest without putting such conditions upon the weaker or smaller counties as to make compliance therewith impossible on their part, or burdening them with a debt to build state roads."

"We urge our road building program be amply financed, commending to the executive and general assembly and the people the adoption of such plan of finance as may seem wise and best after a business survey of this question."

The platform put the convention on record as believing "there is nothing more conducive to the purity of our elections than a strict observance of our election laws," and also as believing that the federal government should exercise itself to provide for absorption of surplus staple crops.

Education Needed. "Believing that the remedy for many of the ills that have beset the state in the past and the hope of future greatness lies in the extension of educational opportunities to those who do not enjoy them," says the plank on education, "this convention earnestly recommends to the legislature for its serious consideration the comprehensive program that has been advanced by the responsible school officials of the state and endorsed by the Georgia education association."

The plank sets out further that the convention recognizes that the educational needs of the state are not met in the financial provisions that are now being made and recommends to the legislature more adequate funds, both for common schools and the university system.

The platform concludes by reaffirming the convention's confidence "in the business ability and integrity of our nominee for governor."

5-YEAR BAR PUT ON DEBT FUNDING CHANGES BY U. S.

Washington, October 14.—High treasury officials are authority for the statement today that no consideration will be given to modifications of foreign debt funding agreements for at least five years. The treasury will schedule the payments during that time as being entirely within the capacity to pay of the debtors.

Neither do officials foresee any modification of the Dawes plan by which the collection of German reparations is financed. So far as can be observed here it is working satisfactorily and propaganda for its revision is discounted.

MRS. DAVIS HEARS OF HUSBAND'S END

Paris, October 14.—(P)—Mrs. D. P. Davis was notified by a radio message from the steamer Majestic today of the death of her husband, prominent Florida real estate man, who was lost from the liner while en route from New York. The message gave no details.

Mrs. Davis said she had expected her husband to join her here tomorrow as soon as the boat train arrived from Cherbourg. Instead she may sail for the United States Saturday.

FRIENDS INVESTIGATE SEA TRAGEDY.

Tampa, Fla., October 14.—(P)—Shocked by the report that D. P. Davis, wealthy real estate developer of this city, had jumped overboard from the steamship Majestic, of the White Star line, relatives and friends of the realtor today redoubled their efforts to find out details of the tragedy.

Information that Davis had "jumped" through a cabin port of the ocean liner was contained in an official report given to the White Star line of office in New York by Captain G. R. Metcalfe, commander of the Majestic. Davis was said to have been a witness to the drowning was ill. The captain stated he was making a thorough investigation.

An hour after receipt of Captain Metcalfe's message here, Arthur M. Milam, vice president of the D. P. Davis Properties, Inc., made public a diagram which he said he had received from Raymond Schmidt and F. W. Montague, employees of the Davis organization, who were accompanying Mr. Davis on the trip to Europe.

This diagram, the second message received by Mr. Milam, indicated that Mr. Davis' death was "purely accidental."

Activities were suspended today at the offices of the Davis company out of respect for the former head of the organization. A cable was received by members of Mrs. D. P. Davis family from Miss Helen Freeman, her traveling companion, saying the widow was prostrated by reports of her husband's death but was "holding up well."

Mrs. Davis and Miss Freeman arrived in Paris several months ago and the D. P. Davis party aboard the Majestic had planned to join them. The cable also stated that Mrs. Davis intended to return home at the earliest moment.

CORLISS PALMER TO WED BREWSTER AFTER DIVORCE

Hollywood, Cal., October 14.—Eugene V. Brewster and his fiancée, Corliss Palmer, have returned here from Sinaloa, Mexico, where the movie magazine publisher has made final arrangements, he says, for a Mexican divorce from Mrs. Eleanor Brewster, of Brooklyn.

This is Brewster's second trip into Mexico on the same mission, in November he will make a final excursion to obtain his divorce, which he expects about Thanksgiving day.

Brewster and Miss Palmer, the blonde beauty whom he elevated from a cigar stand girl in Macon, Ga., to a movie actress, will be married immediately after the divorce, he said.

Newspapermen Fail To Assist Actor's Wooing

Hollywood, Cal., October 14.—(P)—Newspapermen failed in a John Alden role here last night when they attempted to confirm the reported engagement of John Gilbert, film star, to Greta Garbo, Swedish motion picture actress.

"Go ahead and ask her," Gilbert said, after admitting his love for Miss Garbo. "If you do ask her, I hope she says yes. That's the answer I've been waiting for three weeks."

Miss Garbo, who told questioners a day or so ago she would have an answer in a week, could not be reached.

YAARAB CEREMONIAL SCHEDULED TONIGHT

Yaarab Temple's first ceremonial session for the fall season will be held in the auditorium tonight, when a class of 25 unregenerate sons of the desert will cross the hot sands to Mecca, where they will receive the secret and sublime word of a Mystic Shriner.

Candidates will report to Recorder Argard at Taft Hall at 6:30 o'clock and after they are checked in a buffet luncheon will be served in the same hall, beginning at 7 o'clock. At 7:30 o'clock Yaarab's band will play a concert in the auditorium and at 8 o'clock Illustrations Potentate Tom C. Law and his divan will enter under escort of the band, patrol, chanters and Oriental band.

After a spectacular display put on by uniformed organizations the chanters will give a concert, to be immediately followed by the first section of the ceremonial. Between the first and second sections the patrol will give an exhibition drill.

Following the business meeting at Shrine headquarters Wednesday Potentate Law arranged for a meeting of the divan to perfect plans for the big "home-coming" ceremonial to be held in the auditorium on November 23. This event is to feature the out-of-town membership of the temple, and the affair will be planned on a magnificent scale.

At a business meeting a resolution was passed officially informing members of the imperial council that Yaarab Temple would present the name of Past Potentate Henry C. Hines as a candidate for outer guard.

Soperton, Ga., October 14.—(P)—The jury in the trial of S. L. Fulford, charged with the murder of A. F. Bland, returned a verdict of guilty with recommendations this afternoon and a life sentence was imposed by the court. There was no excitement following the verdict.

Fulford was charged with the murder of County Policeman Bland, of Wheeler county, on October 21, 1925. This is the third trial of this defendant, he having been tried twice in Wheeler county and each time was given the death sentence. Change in Routing of Morningside Coach Line to Become Effective Today

Because of the condition of the paving on Piedmont Avenue between North Boulevard and Morningside Drive, it has become necessary to reroute the Coaches on the Morningside line, effective at noon today. From the intersection of North Boulevard and Piedmont Avenue, the Coaches will operate over Sherwood Road to the end of the line, instead of over Piedmont Avenue and Morningside Drive, as in the past.

Although the routing has been changed for a few blocks, the Coaches will continue to operate through some of Atlanta's most beautiful residential sections, including Ansley Park and Morningside, past Ansley Park Golf Club, and through the down-town theater and hotel section to the Terminal Station.

REBUTTAL BEGINS IN TUCKER CASE

Rebuttal testimony will be introduced today in the hearing on a suit seeking to set aside the last will and testament of the late Henry H. Tucker, which is under way before Judge Edgar E. Pomeroy, in Fulton Superior court.

Mr. Tucker left the residue of his estate, valued at $100,000, to Miss Martha Ann Stevens Shannon, a school teacher of Boston, Mass., to whom Mr. Tucker had become very much attached before his death, it is said. Mrs. Henrietta P. Cooper, widow of the late Dr. Hunter P. Cooper and a sister of the late Mr. Tucker, is contesting the will on the grounds that her brother was incompetent of making a will at the time the will was signed.

Hearing got under way Monday morning, and introduction of testimony by Mrs. Cooper's attorneys was concluded Thursday afternoon shortly before court recessed until 9 o'clock this morning.

Testimony given Thursday was to the effect that Mr. Tucker had at one time talked of suicide when on a trip to New York. This testimony was given by Angus E. Orr, a friend of Mr. Tucker, who stated that they went to New York in 1890 from Savannah by boat. When in New York Mr. Tucker also insisted that the two walk to Niagara Falls, a distance of 363 miles, and said that Mr. Tucker desired to walk a mile for each day in the year.

Forrest Adair was another witness placed on the stand by Mr. Cooper's attorney. He testified of his part in a business deal, including rental of a piece of Whitehall property. Mr. Tucker did not complete the deal, Mr. Adair said, and related incidents about the negotiations which tended to show eccentricities of Mr. Tucker. Introduction of rebuttal testimony is expected to consume the entire day today, and a decision probably will be made Saturday.

Major R. J. Guinn, of the New England Life Insurance company, Thursday morning addressed the convention at the Biltmore on "Salesmanship." In the business session Thursday morning the marble dealers gave consideration to problems facing the industry, including that of the present overproduction.

The climax of the day's program came with the annual ball at 7 o'clock night at the Biltmore. Dinner was followed by dancing in the ballroom. Women attending the convention Thursday afternoon were taken on a trip to Stone Mountain.

SLEEP-PRODUCING TABLET VICTIM IS LAID TO REST

Funeral services for Mrs. Jesse Kimbro, of 60 West Cain street, who died Tuesday night after remaining asleep for three days as the result of an overdose of sleeping tablets, were held Thursday afternoon from the chapel of Greenberg & Bond. The Rev. Johnson, pastor of the Union Congregational church, officiated and interment was in Hollywood cemetery.

Mrs. Kimbro is the second person within the past few days to die as the result of an overdose of the same drug. A federal prisoner died shortly after his arrival from Roanoke, Va., recently after taking a quantity of the tablets.

Miss Beatrice Ellis, of 375 North Boulevard, a third victim of the drug, was taken to Grady hospital early Thursday morning in a deep stupor after she took tablets to produce sleep. She was reported slightly improved late Thursday.

20 NUNS, FORCED TO LEAVE MEXICO, DUE HERE TODAY

The Fine Arts Study club, colored, and a number of other colored clubs and fraternities are said to have reserved large blocks of seats. Notwithstanding the small gift of the artist for heavy numbers, she has won, in the estimation of the colored people, a reputation in the mastery of spirituals and melodies.

Prof. Kourer Harrell, who is directing the affair, has had in training some of Atlanta's best colored talent. This will be used in supporting the artist with quartet solos, spirituals and instrumental numbers.

At Five Points

WHERE DOES THE INTEREST earned by money deposited with us COME FROM?

DID you ever stop to think that it is perhaps your money, deposited with us, that helped to grow the Georgia peaches that appeared this morning on ten thousand breakfast tables from New York to San Francisco?

Did you know that your money right now is harvesting wheat in the Dakotas, buying steel rails in Pittsburgh and making it possible for the corner grocer to pay the importer who pays the tea planter who hires the coolie to pick the leaves for your iced tea?

Money deposited with us is money working every minute for you—organizing, directing, financing the work of the world. And you are well paid for the use of your money—for the work it will do is necessary and well-paid work.

Come in and let us tell you about the wages your money can earn—for the Fulton National Bank is not only a friendly convenience but an important unit in the prosperity of Georgia.

TAKE ROAD BOARD OUT OF POLITICS

70 agencies in Georgia which collect various taxes and fees from the people and it was recommended that all these taxes and fees be handled by the treasury department as suggested in a recent report made by State Auditor Sam J. State. The committee recommended that the department of agriculture be "stripped of its political power" and reorganized for the benefit of the farmers of the state.

It was recommended that the chairman of the state highway department be a man selected from business life and that such a chairman be ineligible to run for elective office for a substantial period after his term of service expires. Reorganization of the state banking department under suggestion to be made by T. R. Bennett, head of that department, also was recommended. It was stated that Mr. Bennett should conduct an investigation and if it is found that changes are needed in the laws that such changes be made by the legislature.

Only one question requiring a roll call vote was placed before the convention. This question arose when Sam A. Nunn, Hardman floor leader, introduced a resolution providing that the convention nominate A. S. Bradley, of Swainsboro, as the democratic candidate for the place as solicitor general of the middle Georgia circuit. A fight led by J. T. Bowden, of Ware county, against the passage of the resolution was unsuccessful by a vote of 105 to 58 on a roll call vote.

Point on Authority.

In making the fight it was contended that the convention did not possess the authority to nominate a candidate for this place and that a precedent looking to a return of the old convention system would be set. Mr. Bradley was appointed solicitor general recently by Governor Walker to succeed the late Walter F. Grey. No primary to nominate a man for the full term was held and the convention decided to nominate Mr. Bradley because of the short time between now and the general election to be held November 2.

Chairman Maddox made a brief talk in which he expressed his appreciation over the honor of being named to succeed himself as chairman of the state democratic executive committee.

He urged the delegates to rally to the support of the people who are to be placed in public office during the next two years. Credentials of delegates were examined by the credentials committee, which was headed by Judge Newton D. Morris, of Marietta.

Chairman Maddox read a telegram received from Governor Clifford Walker in which the governor expressed regret because he was unable to be present at the convention because of official duties which kept him at the capitol. He extended cordial greetings to the delegates.

Alex S. Chamlee, of Washington county, who managed the successful campaign of Dr. Hardman, was given a big reception by the convention when he was placed in nomination for the post of permanent chairman. He declined to accept this nomination and suggested the re-election of Chairman Maddox.

The resolutions and platform committee was headed by Judge Whipple with the following members: J. H. Morgan, O. H. Culpepper, A. J. Perryman, J. O. Wood, C. B. Jones, Andrew C. Irwin, G. H. Carswell, A. D. Wood, and W. H. Rountree. Mrs. Mattie Carrington, of Commerce, secretary to Dr. Hardman for 20 years, was presented to the convention and made a brief talk.

Others who talked briefly were Dr. W. H. Rountree, pastor of the Commerce Baptist church; Paul Donohoe, chairman of the Fulton delegation, who nominated George Carswell for temporary chairman, and Mrs. Kate Oliver, of Eastman.

Dr. Hardman made a brief speech of acceptance, expressing his appreciation and outlined the needs of the state and the great opportunities that are awaiting Georgia.

"It is my strong desire and enthusiastic hope that I may be endowed by God with knowledge and wisdom for my task," Dr. Hardman said, and pledged himself to "serve the people with the best of my ability, faithfully representing all citizens and every interest."

The committee was called to order at 10:25 a. m. by G. E. Maddox, of Rome. Following a song, "Dear Old Georgia," by a chorus of Bessie Tift girls, invocation was pronounced and a credentials committee was appointed.

George H. Carswell, of Irwin, was selected as temporary chairman by unanimous vote and was loudly applauded as he mounted the platform.

"We are making a fight for the upbuilding and uplifting of Georgia," Mr. Carswell said in his address. "By gift of God, Georgia is the greatest state in the union," he declared, but said it could not realize its greatest opportunities until education was brought to the forefront. He also appealed for a paved system of roads, and a bank system that would insure depositors that their money would not be misplaced.

Mrs. Bessie Anderson was chosen as temporary secretary.

J. O. Wood, of Atlanta, then delivered the keynote speech, appealing for a greater education system, "elimination of politics as a business," and farm relief.

A recess then was taken to await the report of the credentials committee, which was composed of N. A. Morris, chairman; E. H. Blount, C. W. Hillhouse, Wade H. Lassiter, J. H. Fort, Walter A. Sims, J. O. Elrod, H. J. Bove, J. B. Brooks, A. T. Chamlee, P. T. Knight and L. J. Porter.

The convention was called to order again at 11:50 after the recess which lasted about half an hour.

The report recommended the seating of C. W. Redwine, H. W. Dabie and G. L. Graves, from Fayette county; H. M. Kaigler, Dr. L. Gary, W. E. Crumby, R. C. McGinty, G. F. Worthy, J. H. Wood and J. O. Kaigler, from Quitman; and D. S. Strickland and Thad Kilgore from Douglas. The report was accepted.

The statehouse officers and members of the judiciary were nominated unanimously at 1:50 p. m.

Senator George was unanimously nominated for his first full term as junior United States senator. His name was placed in nomination by Judge Frank McLaughlin, of Columbus, who said "not to re-elect Walter George to the senate would be like an army deserting its general in the field of battle."

Senator George accepted with an extemporaneous speech pledging his best efforts to his people, and promising to seek farm relief and to vote against Vane, of Pennsylvania, and Smith, of Illinois, if they are elected to the senate.

E. T. L. Gordon, of Waycross, C. C. Dunn, of Cedarhurst.

Senator Harris was brought to the platform amid applause.

Mr. George was nominated at 1:12 p. m. and was escorted to the stage by Mrs. Emily Woodward, Mrs. Ralph W. Northcutt and Judge McLaughlin.

Mrs. Hardman was presented to the convention by Mr. Maddox and was given an ovation.

Dr. Hardman in accepting the nomination for governor said:

"Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen: I bring to you greetings of good will from Georgia, and present to you the great seal of the state—Wisdom, Justice, Moderation.

ed to me by the state of Georgia. I will, when elected to this high office, serve the people with the best of my ability; faithfully representing all citizens and every interest."

J. O. Wood, of Atlanta, delivering the keynote speech at the state democratic convention today, urged greater strides in education, relief for the farmers and "the elimination of politics as a business" and appealed for party unity.

Declaring that "the most gripping and engrossing question of today is that of education," Mr. Wood said, "give every child in Georgia an equal opportunity" has been a slogan of the party leaders for many years and "it should be our motto today."

"I want the world to hear me when I say that the farmers of Georgia have produced, but have not profited," he said. "Let us do something to win their love and esteem by assisting them to surmount the obstacles of economic indifference that have overcome them."

"Our party," Mr. Wood concluded, "should concentrate itself to the elimination of politics as a business and substituting business for politics, aptly phrased as 'less government in business, more business in government.'"

Describing the state banking laws as inadequate, he urged that they be revised to meet not only a natural expansion, but the phenomenal growth that is on in the south, and particularly in Georgia.

"Fourth—A business administration must rest on what are recognized as sound business principles. A government whose statutes are founded on Divine law, and which is conducted on sound business methods cannot fail; that the need of this is apparent, and that the opportunity is here, no one will question."

"Progress and happiness are inevitable in a nation, or a state, whose foundation is righteousness, justice and equality."

"As we study the history of the development of this great nation and many of its states, we are impressed with the superior resources of our beloved Georgia, and its commercial and industrial possibilities; we are certain therefore, that her achievements on a high, clean business basis will be tremendous."

United Effort.

"Fifth—Cooperation can but exist under such principles as we are suggesting, and this will bring to us love and good-will among all citizens, and between all sections, and all interests. The indications point to a united effort and activity, which is manifested by the great number of telegrams and letters that I have received, and other cordial expressions that have appeared in the press during the last few days. Therefore, we are hoping that this great state has now become united upon higher, cleaner, and better business methods, than possibly for some time in its past history."

"It is my strong desire and enthusiastic hope, that I may be endowed by God with knowledge and wisdom for my task, and that through the cooperation of this great commonwealth, prosperity and the highest success may come to every interest."

"With these declarations, and with the nomination tendered me by the people of Georgia, and by this state democratic convention, I accept the nomination of the democratic party, as candidate for governor, and pledge myself that with the authority grant

Macon Convention Compared To Baptist "Love Feast"

BY PAUL STEVENSON.
Staff Correspondent.

Macon, Ga., October 14.—Old timers who have attended conventions since Heck was a diminutive canine, said the state convention of the democrats held in Macon Thursday was the quietest event of its kind they had ever witnessed. The supporters of Dr. L. G. Hardman, successful candidate for governor, were in the saddle and in full control and they conducted an old-fashioned Baptist "love feast."

Many good words were spoken for Dr. Hardman and he expressed hearty appreciation of the commendation he received. He told his friends he was eager to give Georgia a solid business administration which he said would aid the state in its forward progress.

Dr. L. R. Christie, of Atlanta, pastor of the Ponce de Leon Baptist church and former pastor of a church at Commerce, nominated Dr. Hardman. Dr. Christie performed the wedding ceremony when Dr. Hardman married 20 years ago.

United States Senators Walter F. George and William J. Harris occupied seats on the stage and were given cordial greetings by their friends.

"We are working in absolute harmony in the senate," Senator Harris said in reference to his relations with the junior senator.

Senator George made an excellent speech before the convention when he was nominated. He was escorted to the speaker's table by Miss Emily Woodward, Mrs. Ralph W. Northcutt and Judge C. F. McLaughlin, of Columbus.

The farm problem is the greatest problem in America today, Senator George declared. He said he believed it is possible to set up an export corporation with sufficient capital to finance the withdrawal from the markets of surplus staples and nonperishable products. He said he also believed production could be controlled without doing violence to the constitution of the United States.

Ovation for Talmadge.

One of the biggest ovations given any of the candidates was bestowed on Eugene Talmadge, nominee for commissioner of agriculture. He expressed the belief that the educational work and the experimental work done in the department of agriculture should be handled by other state departments.

He said he would cut down the number of oil inspectors and said if the legislature, by any chance failed to reduce the number of inspectors, that these inspectors would simply have jobs without any pay. He said the people in electing him broke up the political machine part of the department of agriculture. He pledged himself to work for a reorganization of that department.

Boonlets Told.

Gubernatorial boonlets for the election two years hence were noted during the convention. George H. Carswell, of Macon, was mentioned by many as a probable candidate and he neither denied nor affirmed the report. George M. Napier, attorney general, also was discussed as a future candidate for governor.

Holder Men Present.

Holder men in the recent primary were in the minority at the convention but were recognized by the chairman on several occasions. Thomas J. Hamilton, of Augusta, manager of the Holder campaign, made the motion that the nominations be closed after the name of Dr. Hardman was presented to the convention.

J. T. Bowden, of Ware, a Holder supporter, took considerable part in the discussion over the fight to prevent the convention from declaring A. S. Bradley, of Swainsboro, as the nominee for the post of solicitor general of the middle Georgia district.

Mrs. Anderson Busy.

Mrs. Bessie Anderson, re-elected permanent secretary of the state democratic executive committee, was one of the hardest workers at the convention. She was highly commended for her efficiency by speakers at the sessions of the state committee held Wednesday and at the session of the convention.

Sawmills Voted.

Albert J. Woodruff, who sells sawmill machinery, who recently won the race for one of the places on the public service commission, said he carried every county in Georgia that has a sawmill in it.

Roberts Attends.

Forsaking a fishing trip to Lake Burton was a hard task for Orrin Roberts, of Macon, member of the state public service commission, but he finally chose in favor of the convention and was on hand shaking hands with his friends.

Road Job Rumor.

Many rumors were affloated as to probable appointments to be made by Dr. Hardman when he goes in as governor. He made no announcement himself but reports were heard that his campaign manager, A. S. Chamlee, is slated for chairman of the state highway commission at the expiration of the term of John N. Holder.

Woman on Committee.

Mrs. Howard McCutcheon was the only woman member of the Fulton delegation to the convention which was headed by Paul Donohoe, manager of the Hardman campaign committee in Fulton county. Mrs. McCutcheon was named as a member of the state committee.

Mayor Sims Honored.

Mayor Walter A. Sims, of Atlanta, was honored by being placed on the credentials committee. The mayor was driven to the convention in the official mayor's car by Sam Woodward in a little more than two hours. He was accompanied by James A. Holmstrom, Henderson Hallman and Harry York, of Atlanta.

Business Floors are losing their drab "one-suit" appearance

How a large Pennsylvania corporation secured a smarter-looking business home by combining several patterns in Armstrong Floors throughout their office

A simple Jaspé pattern for the wide-open working spaces

Where the busy clerical force does its work Armstrong's Gray Jaspé Linoleum was laid.

Two tones of gray, in rippled effect, give this floor an up-to-date professional appearance. A border of plain color linoleum adds to the natural architectural lines of the room—the floor really becomes part of the room.

Nearly cemented in place, this cork-linoleum floor quiets pounding heels to a soft patter. The strident click-click of typewriters is hushed. The cork content that absorbs unnecessary noise lends springiness to conserve the energy of employees on their feet.

So much for looks. Now for wear and ease of cleaning

When first laid, these floors were washed—probably for the first and last time in their flooring lives.

They were then waxed and polished. Each night the porters brush up the day's accumulation of dirt and papers. Scrubbing is never needed. Once a month a small, easily operated waxing machine renews their glowing surface.

With only this simple treatment these floors should last a lifetime. Nothing to refinish, for nothing ever wears out; the wax really takes the wear.

The private offices step out with a marble tile pattern

A dignified pattern of Armstrong's Marble Tile Linoleum sets the private offices slightly apart. The color of this design tones in well with the gray Jaspé right outside the door. The pattern bespeaks an authoritative as well as a modern note.

Waxed and polished, this floor offers a smooth, even surface. Chairs don't stick annoyingly when you try to hitch them a few inches closer to your desk.

There are no dark corners in such an office. The floor is bright with color even on the gloomiest day.

Embossed Inlaid Linoleum ultra modern for the DIRECTORS' ROOM

Armstrong's newest achievement in floors—Embossed Handcraft Inlaid—is on the floor of the room where the directors meet monthly.

Architects say this floor has "texture." The surface is actually embossed. The tiles stand slightly upraised; interlining bands of color are pressed below the surface of the goods.

HOOVER DENIES ADVISING TO BUY

Baltimore, October 14.—Secretary Hoover, in reply to an inquiry from Richard H. Edmonds, editor of the Manufacturers Record, in regard to a report that Mr. Hoover had advised foreign cotton manufacturers to buy heavily of cotton for future needs, has wired Mr. Edmonds as follows:

"I have given no such advice as you suggest. I did suggest that our spinners should at once buy the cotton to be used to relieve the market and strengthen their position on international trade when the measures now being taken in the south effectively raised the price. They would be thus doing a double service to themselves and the growers."

The telegram from Mr. Edmonds, to which the foregoing is a reply, was: "Daily papers yesterday reported you as advising foreign cotton manufacturers to buy heavily for future needs while prices are low. As a matter of fact, foreign cotton manufacturers have been doing this very heavily for some weeks. This means that every bale of cotton sold brings a net loss to the growers. On the other hand if the cotton farmers can be urged to withhold their cotton from the market and discontinue all selling until prices at least cover the cost of production hundreds of millions of dollars could be saved to the south."

LODGE SUGGESTS LIFE MAY EXIST ON OTHER PLANETS

London, October 14.—Conviction that life exists on other planets than the earth was expressed by Sir Oliver Lodge, noted British scientist, in a lecture here tonight.

"It seems to me," he said, "because we are uncertain of life on other planets. Life seems to struggle toward existence against adverse circumstances wherever it is. We may reasonably suppose that wherever conditions allow, the same sort of thing will happen as appears on the earth, and that amid the hosts of worlds in the universe there must be multitudes in which the conditions of life are satisfied."

He declared that the stars are well adapted to furnishing light and heat for the planets which surround them.

Chappell Inquest Delayed By Illness of Witness

Mrs. Emma J. Chappell leaving her home in the custody of Fulton county police Wednesday night following her fatal shooting of J. Henry Chappell, her husband, in the Chappell cottage in Center Hill. The woman in the foreground is Mrs. Chappell, while behind and to her left is her daughter. Chappell, who died almost instantly, is shown at the upper left.

Pending a coroner's inquest next Tuesday at 11 o'clock, postponed Thursday morning on account of the illness of Mrs. Mary Thompson, an eye-witness, county police and investigators in the solicitor's office are conducting a thorough investigation into the fatal shooting Wednesday night of J. Henry Chappell by his wife, Mrs. Emma Jane Chappell, at their home in Center Hill.

Mrs. Thompson, a daughter of Mrs. Chappell by a former marriage, recently left a local hospital after a serious illness and was unable to attend the inquest at the chapel of St. C. Rasmussen Thursday morning. Justice A. A. Owen, who presided in the absence of Coroner Paul Donohue, delayed the investigation. Dr. H. B. Estes, Mrs. Thompson's physician, stated that his patient would probably be able to attend the inquest next Tuesday.

County Policeman Ernest Roberts, who was the first officer to arrive on the scene after the crime, testified Thursday that he found Mrs. Chappell sitting beside the body of her husband on the front porch.

Story Told By Wife.
"She said she shot him because she had to," said the policeman. "He had beaten her and she said that she seized a pistol from the mattress of a bed in the front room of the house and ran out on the porch," Roberts added. "Mrs. Chappell told me that she did not look behind her, but thrust the revolver under her arm so that the muzzle pointed backward and fired without aim."

Frank Donohue and Lieutenant J. M. Carroll, of the county police force, and Marvin Baker, special investigator of the solicitor's staff, gave similar testimony. Dr. H. L. Redd testified used in Chicago gang warfare, the gang raked a motor-cycle rider from his machine and the driver and guard of a mail truck from their seat.

They escaped in two sedans. Both bearing stolen license plates. Riding past stop signals in Newark, the fugitives drove at such speed that police who took up the pursuit returned to report that they had lost the trail.

The men are believed to be led by James Cunliffe, "The Killer," and to be the same gang which raided the Merck Chemical works several weeks ago at Rahway, obtaining a large store of narcotics.

Some such explanation as this was necessary to account for the desperation and fury with which they attacked the mail truck and its guards.

No Warning Given.
The attack came without warning, although it was evident that the gang knew of the valuable contents of the little truck which was rolling through a busy Elizabeth street, a motorcycle policeman clanking alongside for protection.

Appearing suddenly from behind the truck, the bandits bore down in their two machines. One car, driven at high speed, deliberately ran down Motorcycle Policeman Jacob Christman. The other drew up alongside the truck.

From the window of the second sedan, a light machine gun, of the Thompson sub-caliber type, began to spit flame and bullets.

John Enz, driver of the mail truck, and Patrick Quinn, his helper, were literally swept from their seat by the rain of bullets.

The shooter sprayed the street with lead, as pedestrians, shouting with terror, sought cover. Windows were shattered and bullets kicked spurs of mortar from the sides of buildings.

One passer-by—it was miraculous that it was only one—was struck in the arm. In an instant, the street was deserted, while in the distance, police whistles shrieked their call for help.

No Mercy Is Shown.
Meanwhile the other bandits had spilled from their two machines and leaped to the mail truck. One seized the wheel and drove the truck backwards and forwards over the prostrate body of John Enz, who lay helpless in the street. Another fired three bullets into Policeman Christman, who was lying wounded by the roadside.

Breaking into the truck from the rear, the bandits took from the mails sacks of registered letters and packages of currency, $200,000 in payrolls which had been shipped from New York banks.

These they flung into their cars, and after a final volley from the deadly Thompson gun, they were off, speeding in the direction of Newark and the sparsely populated mountains beyond.

Governor Smith And W.R. Hearst Engage in Clash

New York, October 14.—(AP)—Governor Alfred E. Smith, in a campaign speech at Horrell tonight, charged that William Randolph Hearst, publisher of the New York Journal-American, and one-time democratic candidate for governor, is allied with and directing the campaign of his republican opponent in the gubernatorial race, Ogden L. Mills. The governor charged that the publisher's influence "has resulted in degrading the republican campaign to the usual Hearst level."

"It seems," he said, "that the fates have decreed that in every political contest in which I take part there is the sinister figure of Hearst and all that he stands for in the eyes of the American public. The type of campaign is the same one which Hearst employed to vilify and slander William McKinley, Grover Cleveland, Theodore Roosevelt, Elihu Root, Charles E. Hughes and practically every decent leader of both the great parties."

Mr. Hearst, replying to Governor Smith's speech, said:

"I think that Congressman Mills is capable of attending to Governor Smith without any assistance. Governor Smith evidently thinks so, too, as he is doing his best to avoid and evade the issues which Congressman Mills has presented so powerfully."

"Governor Smith says I have criticized and abused Cleveland, McKinley, Root and Hughes, and he naively associates himself with these distinguished men."

In the course of editorial activities I also had occasion to criticize Mayor Van Wyck of New York City, Secretary Fall, of the oil trust; Secretary Alger, of the best trust; Ward, of the bread trust, and Baer, of the coal trust.

"Why should not Governor Smith, of milk trust repute, more modestly classify himself with this latter group—with these rascally betrayers of public confidence?"

"That is where he best belongs."

er with the enlistment personnel of the organized reserves for a period of 15 days every three years; a reserve officer training corps adequate to provide 5,000 officers annually; a citizen's military training camp of 50,000 men, the procurement, development and maintenance of such material and camps as will properly equip all the before mentioned components and the further maintenance of an adequate war reserve for three field armies.

The delegates cheered when the committee reported that it favored the immediate passage of the Johnson-Capper bill, known as the universal draft bill, not only as a measure of preparedness, but also to prevent future wars, thus eliminating slackers and profiteers.

The committee endorsed the work of the National Rifle association in its efforts to spread the doctrine of rifle marksmanship in high schools. The report also contained the following:

"Believing that teaching of national defense to the youth of the nation is the highest patriotism, the American Legion stands resolutely for military training in the high schools, colleges and universities, and pledges itself to actively oppose those pacifists, radicals, communists and others who are endeavoring in every possible way to stop such training."

FRENCH RADICALS REGAIN STRENGTH

Bordeaux, France, October 14.—(AP)—The thrice split radical party, which became the master of the political situation in France after the elections of 1924, only to lose its grip through the difficulties of the financial situation and international strife, today began here the difficult task of reuniting its various factions.

The three-day convention and the decisions that it makes are of vital interest to the present Poincare cabinet, which may stand or fall on the result.

The extremists within the party have taken the attitude that the present coalition with the socialists must be revamped and that the party members must be summoned to retire from the Poincare cabinet. This would mean the downfall of the present ministry as soon as parliament convenes.

Eduard Herriot, radical socialist leader, who is minister of education in the Poincare government, is the center about whom most of the controversy will revolve. If his participation in the government should be disfavored, it is felt that the national union cabinet of Poincare would suffer a swift break up.

The moderates within the radical party are inclined to support a resolution under which party unity would be declared on the principle that a solution of the present financial and monetary problems in France requires the support of a union government for the time being. Adoption of this program would save the ministry.

terial and camps as will properly equip all the before mentioned components and the further maintenance of an adequate war reserve for three field armies.

The delegates cheered when the committee reported that it favored the immediate passage of the Johnson-Capper bill, known as the universal draft bill, not only as a measure of preparedness, but also to prevent future wars, thus eliminating slackers and profiteers.

The committee endorsed the work of the National Rifle association in its efforts to spread the doctrine of rifle marksmanship in high schools. The report also contained the following:

"Believing that teaching of national defense to the youth of the nation is the highest patriotism, the American Legion stands resolutely for military training in the high schools, colleges and universities, and pledges itself to actively oppose those pacifists, radicals, communists and others who are endeavoring in every possible way to stop such training."

Second Fall Off Pole Fatal To Lineman

Rome, Ga., October 14.—(Special.)—Falling a second time with the same high tension wire pole, which collapsed three months ago and caused himself serious injury and killed J. M. Lane, his co-worker, J. A. McKelvey, 23, of Lawrenceville, today met death when the pole again fell, causing him to come in contact with a 66,000 volt wire of the Georgia Railway & Power company.

Mr. McKelvey was an employee of the power company as a lineman and was working on the line that connected Lindale with the Tennessee lines. First intimation of his peril came today when a co-worker heard his agonizing cries, and saw him fall.

He had only recovered recently from injuries received in the first accident and had been back to work a short time.

The body is being held at Brittain Brothers, undertakers at Lindale, awaiting advice from McKelvey's mother, Mrs. Jessie McKelvey, at Lawrenceville, where it is thought the funeral and interment will be held.

QUALITY

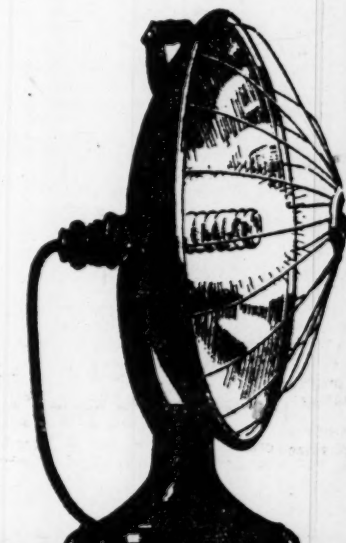

A year ago, Ridgways discovered that a surprising number of people thought that Ridgways was an expensive luxury—that it cost too much.

They started at once to tell the truth that ounce for ounce and pound for pound Ridgways cost no more than other teas.

Now people know that quality for quality it costs less to buy.

'My Life Story'

Written by Rudolph Valentino

41ST INSTALLMENT.

When, at last, drenched to the skin from the pelting winter sleet, footsore, discouraged and tired out, I finally reached my room again, I dropped on the bed and cried like a small and very homesick boy. I bitterly regretted in that hour all that I had done at home, all the valiant resolutions that had landed me in this far country, where I could not even find my way about.

I eventually sat down and wrote a long and rather desolate letter to my mother, repeating therein all of my follies and warning her that I was not to return to Italy by the next steamer.

Lonely and Heartick.
The other things that I mentioned to my mother—the other thing that so amazed me—was chewing gum. I told my mother that all the people, or most of them, were incessantly chewing, chewing, chewing! I said that I could not understand it because, while they kept on chewing endlessly they never put anything in their mouths. I thought, I said that Americans must belong to the ruminating family. I had, oddly, perhaps, never had any chewing gum in 14-15.

I think, though, as I sit here so deeply thinking back, that the lowest ebb of my life came on that Christmas Eve, only one day after my arrival in New York. The abyss of loneliness, the solitary dinner in a small cafe, and the very food tasted bitter with my unshed tears.

One doesn't dare to cry in America. It is unmanly, here. But, at any rate, the dinner was the least of my difficulties, for I couldn't eat it any way. Afterward I walked for hours, up and down Fifth Avenue, around the fountain in Central park, through the Zoological gardens, around and about the Museum of Natural History. I tried to tell myself that I was in New York, that it was the one place of all places I myself desired to be, and that before long I should be triumphantly a part of it all and should then love it.

But in that dark hour, with the sense of happy families and relatives pressing in upon me, all that I felt was my loneliness, my isolation, my strangeness. It was then I realized how very lonely one may be in a strange city. How people, just people with their indifferent faces, can isolate one from the very world.

New Year's Eve.
New Year's Eve was another dark, dark hour in my life. Crowds, surging crowds of people, bright-faced and on pleasure bent. Oceans of light words, an light laughter drifting over me like cold waves—I couldn't even understand the joy of the others.

That night, I remember, I went home and tried to read myself to sleep, but the bells of New York kept ringing in my ears, as if on purpose to mock me.

Of course I couldn't look for work until I had acquired some knowledge of the English language. And I thought that one of the best ways to do that would be to promenade the streets, picking up scraps and sentences here and there. Once in a while I would drop into Bustanoby's, where I could talk to the waiters in French. It was here that I met my first friends in the new country.

One evening I was sitting there, and I must have looked very lonely and apart, for presently a young fellow detached himself from a group of an adjoining table, came over and asked me in French if I would join his party.

My First Friends Here.
I simply faltered my thanks, being unable to express the extravagant gratitude I felt for this first human contact.

And this is the way that I met my first American friend, George Ragui, and Count Alex Salm and his brother. I got all on for pages telling of all we did together and how I began to lay, albeit unconsciously, corner stones for what was to come. But it must suffice here for me to record that I was with these friends that I began to dance in America. Every night we would go out together, to some cafe or other, and they would introduce me to girls they knew and I would attempt to dance.

At times, with my bad attempts and my equally annoying persistence, I became one of the best wallflowers in the city of New York. I supported more ballroom walls than any other man I have ever heard of. I finally gave it up, and the next day I told them that I would never let him go until he taught me the tango.

My next necessary step, I felt, was to get along better with the English language. I realized that I was making very slow progress at G. G. G. because Italian was spoken there and I could and did lapse into my mother tongue whenever I felt tired or was in a hurry. It took courage, because I am rather indolent, as they say, to approach a successful conclusion.

The idea was suggested by Mrs. A. F. Nunn, wife of a North Georgia conference pastor, and she and Dr. Dempsey, with others, have fostered the movement. A very impressive moving picture film has been made under auspices of Rev. Robert Stewart and a company associated with him built around his adventures as the "raiding parson" of the North Georgia annual conference. This film is being exhibited principally in Methodist churches of the conference and is meeting with success, it is said.

The management of the film is interested in the success of the effort to establish the memorial for Mrs. Stewart and in giving 25 per cent of proceeds to the church where the film is shown.

RADIO TEST CAR BEING SENT HERE BY GOVERNMENT
S. W. Edwards, of Detroit, supervisor of radio for the eighth district, will reach Atlanta some time Friday with the radio test truck of the United States department of commerce bureau of navigation. Mr. Edwards, designer of the unique automobile, will be accompanied by an inspector from his territory.

Through the efforts of Major Walter Van Nostrand, Jr., radio supervisor for this district, the government was induced to allow the test car to come to Atlanta for exhibition at the Atlanta Radio-Electrical exposition, which opens at the auditorium on Monday. It will remain here until the show closes on Saturday, October 23.

The government plans to have similar machines built and equipped for use in other radio districts. One will operate from Atlanta and others will be assigned to Boston, New York, Baltimore, New Orleans, San Francisco, Seattle, Chicago and Detroit.

Equipped with every known device for making various radio tests, particularly with reference to locating interference, the automobile which Atlantaans will see here is the only one of its kind in the world.

ALABAMA WINS FIDDLERS' CONTEST CONDUCTED ON AIR
J. C. Price, of Clanton, Ala., has been named winner of the radio old-time fiddlers' contest held during the Southeastern fair, under auspices of the Sears-Roebuck agricultural foundation. Price received first honors by a vote cast by radio listeners in 20 states. He will be awarded a cash prize of $50.

Second honors went to J. P. Mitchell, of Atlanta, who will receive $25. G. L. Lyles, of Monticello, Ga., captured third prize of $15, and Mr. J. P. Wheeler, of Atlanta, only female contestant, won fourth prize and will receive $10.

Twenty-two fiddlers of the southeast entered the competition, which was the first such contest in the south to be held over radio with radio listeners deciding the best fiddlers by their postcard and letter votes.

CHURCH TO LAY STONE FOR NEW SUNDAY SCHOOL
With appropriate exercises the congregation of the Morningside Presbyterian church will lay the cornerstone of its new $25,000 Sunday school building at Morningside drive and Highland avenue at 3:30 o'clock next Sunday afternoon.

Its outer walls and roof completed, the edifice will soon be ready for occupancy, according to the Rev. Carl W. McMurray, pastor, who will officiate at the ceremony. The stone will be placed by P. D. Christian, Sr., chairman of the building committee.

With 75 charter members, the church was organized eleven months ago. There are now 90 members enrolled. Worship has been conducted in a brick building on the church property pending erection of the new building. A large auditorium, two departmental assembly rooms and 20 class rooms are included in the floor plan. It is of brick veneer construction.

Dr. J. Spole Lyons, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, and Dr. William H. Hark, superintendent of home missions for the Atlanta presbytery, will be the principal speakers at the exercises. In the stone will be placed a brief history of the founding of the church, including the names of those who have taken an outstanding part in the undertaking.

of my success in New York, my comfort, my wonderful achievement! Tempted to End Life.

There came a day when I would have swept the streets for bread. There came a day when I thought again of suicide—this time in that most bitter of all bitter ways—on an empty, aching stomach.

But part of my code has always been that only a coward dies of his own hand; the man worth while hangs on, though he hangs to a cross, I have to hang on!

At last the tables turned. It is too long a story to record here, and some day, when the sting of it so completely has faded away that I can write of it dispassionately and with a just perspective, I may be tempted to put down all the harrowing details, but I finally did land a job at Max Baer's, dancing with women who came there minus their clothes.

One thing led to another. A job with Bonnie Glass. One with Joan Sawyer, all evolving by processes, dim enough at first, to the final beginning of my screen career. Painful step by painful step, but with each bit of progress the pain diminished, hope began to peep through the heavily gathered clouds and my coming to America to achieve these phantasms. Fame and fortune began to seem not so preposterous a thing. There came the day when I was able to write to my mother, legitimately, on Hotel Astor stationery. A proud moment!

In tomorrow's paper Rudolph Valentino grows more intimate in his confessions. He advises his father's old doctor to send his son to America. He finds an old door that brings back a childhood hour of dark hobnobbing and dim terror. Further intimacies that will intrigue you.

Memorial to Wife Of 'Raiding Parson' Urged by Leaders
Dr. Elam F. Dempsey, secretary of the North Georgia conference, announced Thursday that the movement to provide a memorial tablet and a memorial fund of about $1,000 for a memorial hospital in honor of the heroism of Mrs. Robert Stewart, who lost her life defending her husband and home at Draketown, Ga., November 13, 1924, from attack by a mob, is approaching a successful conclusion.

The idea was suggested by Mrs. A. F. Nunn, wife of a North Georgia conference pastor, and she and Dr. Dempsey, with others, have fostered the movement. PALESTINE GROWING, VISITOR DECLARES

Moses Levene, a resident of Jerusalem, Palestine, and a representative of the Memorial Palestine Building corporation, who arrived in Atlanta Thursday to interest the Jewish people in the development of Mount Carmel and Haifa, stated that "Palestine has never enjoyed a happier political condition and a more prosperous industrial condition than at present."

Mr. Levene gave a glowing account of the progress in Palestine. "New life has been infused in its commercial activities by the final decision of the British government to build one of the greatest harbors in the Near East at Haifa and to advance $6,000,000 of the $25,000,000 construction cost," he said. "Thousands of immigrants will be employed in this project. Begining in 1927 a new currency, to replace the present Egyptian money, will be issued and will be engraved with English, Hebrew, and Arabic lettering. This will be the first time since the destruction of the temple that coins will appear with Hebrew characters.

"For this, Jews the world over are grateful to the mandatory power and the United States, which is signatory to it." While in Atlanta, Levene is staying with his friend, Rabbi A. P. Hirmes, at 416 Washington street.

Black Butterflies

By ELIZABETH JORDAN

INSTALLMENT XXIII.

AN ODD STREAK OF COMMON SENSE.

"I don't see why we should wait much longer to be married," Dorinda mentioned.

David moved restlessly in his pet chair before the fireplace. It was New Year's day, and they had lunched together and motored a hundred miles after lunch, with a blissful freckles stretched between them. Now they were back in the Maxwell house, having tea before the fire. They were safe from interruption. Even yet, while the social stock of Miss Maxwell was undoubtedly rising in her native town, no one but members of the Butterflies dropped in on her informally, though myopic ladies who in the past had failed to recognize her in the streets were now doing so with ease and affability. As to the Butterflies, the condition in which they had left the house the night before, after celebrating the entrance of the New Year, had been such as to interfere with any further social efforts on their part for at least twenty-four hours.

It was an excellent time to discuss plans, but David's most recent memories of the Butterflies were not such as to make him contemplate with pleasure a future which held them in its foreground. They had been what he considered "the limit" last night. They had been so much the limit that what he most desired was never to see any of them again. But of course he must see them again, and often. That was in the bond. For the thousandth time he asked himself what Dorinda saw in them. She wasn't like them, thank God! And yet, incredibly, she was fond of them. Her relief when she realized that they were prepared, however reluctantly, to accept her marriage with David, had amazed him.

"They hate it, as I knew they would, but they'll stand by," she had told him with shining eyes. But she had been careful not to repeat their comments on the announced engagement.

"We'll stand by till you see the error of your ways and get a nice, scandalous divorce," Chad had promised. "That is, we'll stand by if you'll agree not to spoon before us. I don't think we could bear watching you hold hands and smile into each other's eyes, Dorry. I really don't. The thing that has saved us so far is that you've nobly refrained from spooning in our presence."

"Besides," Jim added, "Dorry may realize her blunder before she marries Goddard. Thousands of girls learn to see for the first time during their engagements."

"Make it a nice, long engagement," Kitty begged, "till Mr. Goddard's jaw loses that set look it has. If you don't, I'm perfectly sure he'll polish your hardwood floors with you."

And "a nice, long engagement" the Butterflies assumed that it would be. Today, in his present mood, David wanted a long engagement, too. Memory threw him a flash picture of Chad Bailey welcoming the New Year on top of the piano, impersonating a faun with the aid of a fur floor mat and blowing drunkenly at two long wax candles. If this sort of thing was "beauty," David was prepared to rub through life without beauty. If this was companionship, he wanted no more companionship with these three profligates. He could not speak, and Dorinda went on unobserved.

"If Norma meant to come back soon I'd wait," she confessed. "I did wait her, dreadfully, for so many reasons. But in that formal letter she sent me when I wrote her of our engagement she said she wouldn't be back till March. We can't wait that long."

"No," David hastily agreed, "we certainly can't." He had suddenly remembered that his finances would not last that long. Indeed, they were almost exhausted.

"So we can be married almost any day," Dorinda proceeded. "Suppose you have the papers you spoke of drawn up tomorrow—see Mr. Hatch about it early so he can't dawdle. He'll have a lot of things to do to make me my own mistress. Besides, of course, we must have individual agreements, which we will both sign and keep, admitting that the marriage isn't a real one, and guaranteeing each other entire liberty of action and all that. Not that we couldn't trust each other," she added hastily as his expression changed, "but because—because—"

"Because it's better to have everything in black and white," David agreed. "I will draw up those papers tonight and bring them to you tomorrow."

"We can be married in Chester," Dorinda resumed.

"Very quietly."

"Very quietly. We'll steal away in the morning, say on Saturday, and be married at noon. Then we can come back here Monday or Tuesday."

"Great Scott! Where are we going in the meantime?"

The exclamation burst from him so irrepressibly that Dorinda laughed. He had not realized that a fake honeymoon journey might be included in his expenses.

"I don't know, but we've got to go somewhere," she good-humoredly pointed out. "It would look awfully queer if we didn't. We'll take the roadster, and I thought we could motor for a few days, if you like—while the town is getting over the first excitement."

"That's a good idea," David agreed. They never talked much when they were motoring.

"We must telegraph the details of the wedding to the newspapers here right after the ceremony," Dorinda went on, thinking aloud. "I'll get the license tomorrow and see the minister at Chester—and I must ask Hatch for a few days off," David mused in his turn. "He'll give them. He'll be immensely relieved to know he can drop the responsibility of me on your shoulders. He has been feeling it a lot lately, the poor dear. I'm quietly having father's rooms put in order for you," Dorinda went on, "papered and painted and generally freshened up. There's a sitting room, a bedroom and a bathroom, all comfortable, but of course when you get into them you can make any changes you like. They connect with mine," she added lightly. "Mine used to be mother's. Naturally we've got to think of the servants."

David turned his eyes to the fire. Modern girls were amazing. They took his breath away. She was saying all this as sexlessly as if she were a phonograph.

"There's another point," she continued. "I'm going to get a big check cashed and give you your first quarter's salary and our expense money before we start. Of course you will pay all the bills, and pay them here at home, too, after we get back. We will have a joint checking account—that's probably the best way to manage it. It will be such a comfort to have all that off my hands," she added earnestly. "I loathe business, but I think you'll see that I've kept everything pretty straight so far."

"I don't mind telling you that this financial end of the business gives me the pip," David admitted. "But all right. Everything will be just as you say, of course."

For a moment he looked very much as if he had the pip. He had opened his mouth to announce his determination to pay the wedding expenses and had suddenly recalled the embarrassing detail that he could not do it.

The interview with Hatch the following morning went off with less nervous strain than he had expected. Evidently the lawyer had been looking for some such confidences, for he accepted David's brief statement without surprise and nodded agreement with the idea of a quiet wedding.

"Very wise in the circumstances. I've realized that this was coming," he told the young man, "and I needn't tell you it's a big relief to me—a very big one. I knew Dorinda was pretty sure to take the only way that meant liberty, but I was afraid she'd pick the wrong man—some average youth I couldn't exactly object to and yet would hesitate to approve. I might have known that the odd streak of common sense she has would come to the top in this matter. I suppose you've discovered that she has a very unusual mind."

"But I didn't dare to hope she would marry so soon," Hatch went on when David had offered his tribute to the mind of his fiancée. "She seemed so bitter against marriage. However, all's well that ends well," he finished, almost jubilantly.

With a view to giving citizens of the state an opportunity to enroll under the banner of the American National Red Cross, Governor Walker urged them to respond wholeheartedly and suggested that special analysis be laid upon the work of the

Crimson Tide Reaches Atlanta Today For Tornado Tilt

TECH HIGH AND STEELERS CLASH AT SPILLER'S TODAY

Dayton High Squad Indulges in Secret Practice Thursday

Tolbert Is Confident Despite Three Injured Men—Ohio City Lions Brings Two Strong Squads For Intersectional Prep Battle.

BY BEN COTHMAN.

TECH HIGH has finished its preparation, Steele High is in the city, and everything is in readiness for the biggest prep battle that Atlanta has witnessed in years, to come off this afternoon at Spiller's field. The time is 2:30 o'clock.

The northerners arrived Thursday morning, and Coach Smith pulled a stunt similar to that of Tulane last Saturday, and as a result sport scribes were unable to locate the Steele team yesterday afternoon. However, according to all dope, the northern team is in great shape for this afternoon's prep classic, and the large crowd will be treated to some good football.

Tech High is going into the game with three of the best men warming the bench. Charlie Bardwell, star halfback, is suffering a broken collar bone. Captain Mel Davis says that he will play this afternoon, but from the condition of his leg, it is not possible that he can last through the game. Heavy Hammond, another backfield man, has a badly bruised foot, and will probably see little service in the game.

Steele was scheduled to arrive Friday morning, but managers of the team decided to take no chances on the Lions not becoming acclimated, so Wednesday night, 18 players, coaches, faculty and student managers entrained for Atlanta.

Lions Are Strong.

The Lions are bringing one of the best teams that they have had in years. Chief among these is Captain Bob Haas, all mid-western halfback last year. Haas tips the scales at 185 pounds, and is considered one of the best prep ball carriers in America. This year he has been going better than ever, getting away for long runs in every game.

When the Smithies journeyed to Dayton in 1924, Steele, unleashed an aerial attack that caused the Smithies' downfall. It is reported that Steele has that same aerial attack this year, and Coach Tolbert has trained the Smithies accordingly, and this fact will add the home team against the visitors.

Coach Smith announced Thursday night that Smith, big 185-pound fullback, was injured last week and would not start in the game this afternoon, but would most likely see some service. The rest of the line-up will represent the best that Steele has, and they will fight hard tomorrow in order to turn in a victory.

This marks the third time that the Dayton school has invaded the south and on each occasion before, they have gone back home defeated. Coach Smith said Thursday that he was confident of his team going back with a victory this time. He announced that with the exception of Smith all of his men were in the best of shape, and ready to play their best game of the season.

Tolbert Confident. Coach Tolbert, of Tech High, also made announcement Thursday night. He is also confident of victory. "In

LEADS TECH HI

CAPTAIN "MOTO" DAVIS.

Who will be seen in action at Spiller's field this afternoon when Tech High meets Steele High of Dayton, Ohio. Captain Davis plays left end on the local prep team.

In spite of my injured men, I believe that we can beat Steele," he said. This morning the Tech High band will parade downtown, advertising the game.

Students of Tech High have been busy for the last two weeks selling tickets and officials at the school announced that the advance sale had run over 2,000.

Tickets are on sale at Tech High, and Marshall and Reynolds in the Flatiron building.

Charlie Thompson, who has been in great demand as a prep official this year, will referee the game.

Don't forget the time—2:30. The teams—Tech High, of Atlanta, Steele High, of Dayton, Ohio, in Atlanta's first intersectional prep game battle. And the place is Spiller's.

The probable lineups:

STEELE HIGH, TECH HIGH.

Marsh, I. E. Davis (c) Steiger, I. E. Davis (c) Yeager, I. E. Davis (c) Wisner, I. E. Davis (c) Scott, I. E. Davis (c) Gardner, I. E. Davis (c) Schubert, I. E. Davis (c) Haas (c) I. E. Davis (c) Butz, I. E. Davis (c) Hendricks, I. E. Davis (c) Rye, I. E. Davis (c) Referee, Thompson (Georgia); umpire, Reynolds (Georgia); field judge, Fuzzy Woodruff (Alabama); head linesman, Burgess (Auburn). Time of periods, 15 minutes.

Several plays are used to prepare for a certain play that one depends on for a touchdown or a long gain.

This is more often true since the development of the forward pass than formerly. The forward pass has introduced many new passing and running plays. It has almost doubled the number of plays that were used 15 years ago.

I do not mean that every team uses twice as many plays in one game as it used formerly. What I mean to say is that every major team has a repertoire of twice as many plays as it formerly had.

Teams do not use the same plays in every game; not in these days. Part of the program of plays is always changed. The selection depends upon opponents and conditions before the game and situations that develop during the game.

The same situation is not always handled in the same way.

Position of the ball counts for a great deal in football. When you are near the sidelines you cannot use the same play that you use at midfield. Either your right or left side is blocked. The defense is simplified. Your opponent has to check you at only one side. In this situation the ball is carried over the sidelines, generally by the quarterback. There is no gain. Often you lose from one to three yards. But you accomplish what you are after since the ball is brought toward the center line of the field and you are again able to work against both ends of the defense line.

In football there are several plays for position. Such a play means getting the ball to a certain spot. Many of the plays are suited only for certain zones and certain positions in those zones. There are plays for the middle of the field, plays for the left side and plays for the right side.

Calculate All Factors.

Let us suppose that we are on either side of the field within the 20-yard line. We have been there before during the afternoon and failed to gain ground enough to score a touchdown. The defense again is too stiff for our advance. We have a good drop or placement kicker. There is one minute left to play before the half ends. It is second down with eight yards to gain.

We have time for two plays. One of these should score for us. The percentage of chance for scoring a touchdown is slight; so slight that we should not risk a try at field goal to kick a field goal. Our position on the field, near the sideline, reduces the chance of success because of the difficult angle, but we can improve our position.

This improvement is secured by an end run. The ball is passed to a back, whose job it is to carry it to a point that will place the ball on a direct line with the goal posts. If the runner can gain while doing this, so much the better, but if he loses ground our end is achieved if he is thrown at a point on a line with our objective.

By making that run, even though it results in the loss of ground, we have reduced the risk of a try at field goal and vastly increased our chances of scoring three points on the last play in the half.

Any team that has a good forward passer and a successful line plunger in its backfield has a decided advantage. One makes the other succeed.

TECH HIGH AND STEELE CLASH TODAY

MIKE DONAHUE CELEBRATION IS PLANNED

Baton Rouge, La., October 14.—(AP) Led by Coach Mike Donahue, who acquired his reputation as coach of Auburn football teams for 19 years, Louisiana State university's Tigers left here late today for Montgomery, Ala., where they will meet their mentor's former charges Saturday.

In honor of the former tutor of the Plainsmen, Saturday has been designated "Donahue day" in the Alabama city. Many graduates of Auburn are expected to be in Montgomery to greet the man who developed many powerful machines while coach of Alabama Polytechnic institute.

The final workout on home grounds before the departure today was marked by the return to the Bengal lineup of Ed McGill, dependable end who had been suffering from an injured wrist. McGill's presence was missed last week when Tennessee's Volunteers set back L. S. U. 14 to 7. Durant will start at the other flank, Babers and Nesom will play at the tackles, Tinsley and Wilson, guards, and Sam Morgan, center.

Connell, Godfrey, Haynes and Mason will compose the backfield.

A round of entertainment has been arranged for the visitors, including a dance Friday night and the Tech-Alabama game Saturday afternoon.

Students of Tech High have been busy for the last two weeks selling tickets and officials at the school announced that the advance sale had run over 2,000.

Bama Students Give Tides Great Send-Off

BY BOB MATHERNE.

UNIVERSITY, ALA., October 14.—Cheered on by hundreds of students and Tuscaloosians, Alabama's 1926 Crimson Tide departed for Atlanta shortly after 9 o'clock tonight. The morning early will find them in Atlanta, an hour or more before most folks will be up and worrying about toast and coffee.

There were 28 waves along with Wallace Wade, Henry Crisp and Manager Joyce. It was, with one or two exceptions in reserves, the same troupe that journeyed to Nashville and to Meridian in successful trips already made this year. It was all that Alabama has to put on the field against Tech this Saturday to attempt giving Tech its third defeat at the hands of Wallace Wade.

There are more colorful eleven in existence than this one of Wallace Wade's, but there are few who take football any more seriously or who go about it in any more business-like way. The Tide is a machine, one of those machines dependent on perfect cooperation from all its parts, and one not likely to place the credit more on one than the other.

Alabama gridders were escorted to the station tonight by a mob of students and Tuscaloosians following the biggest pep meeting of the year on the gymnasium floor. There were speeches and yells and all the other sort of things that arouses one's fighting spirit, and there was a long walk of approximately four miles to the station. But it was all in a good cause and the supporters placed the Tide on the train with the wish that Tech be wrecked again.

The final workout was a light one of signal drill. It was a mixed eleven of the backfield and Captain Barnes, Caldwell and Brown. The fourth man apt to be Johnson, Rosenfeld, Earl Smith, Vines or Taylor. Yes, Archie Taylor, the lone Georgia boy on the squad who expressed a keen desire to play against the Georgians despite his crippled hand. Taylor may get in, too. He is the fastest man on the squad and that's saying a lot with Brown, Caldwell and Barnes to be considered.

Winslett and Knis are practically certain flankers. If Holmes is at center, Pearce is likely to take Pickhard's tackle position, but it is hardly likely if Pickhard can stand the task. Payne and Hagler look to be the guard choices. Holmes, first choice, and Pearce second choice. Oliver line men apt to see service are Morrison, an end; Bowdren, a guard slightly crippled; Pepper, an end, and MacDonald, a tackle.

The Tide is out to win. If the Tech boys fail to stop the Crimson's Saturday, it will be that much harder for the other teams to be played on following Saturdays. There's to be "no saying touchdowns" on Alabama's part for the coming games. The Tide wants to win, wants to keep Tech scoreless again, and are going into the battle with all the power at their command to win.

This is not saying they will win or that they are confident of winning. They have the desire and are going to put up a scrap deserving of victory, and, well, they stand as good a chance of winning as Tech does. There'll be some 5,000 fans from Alabama there to see what happens just the same.

MODERN FOOTBALL

BY BENNY FRIEDMAN

(Captain and Quarterback Coaches' 1925 All-American)

(NOTE)—When the three great coaches, Knute Rockne, Glenn Warner and "Red" Jones, selected a 1925 All-American team, they were unanimous on one player, Benny Friedman, of Michigan, led the All-star selection both as quarter and center. Friedman was the leading scorer of the Big Ten conference, one of the greatest in the country for the year, though he never called his own plays. Friedman has won the 20-yard line. He is one of the most famous field generals of all time; one of the three great passers the game has developed; last year he scored 23 goals from placement. Friedman is a great runner because of his change of pace and straight arm, and a great blocker and tacker. This year his sense for strategy places him as the leader of the Michigan team, though he never called his own plays. Friedman has won the 20-yard line. Mrs. Bradley Is Winner In Woman's Golf Tourney

Mrs. Lowndes Loses By 6-to-4 Score After Hard-Fought Match

Mrs. Roy Burns Wins in Second Flight and Mrs. Thomas Wilson in Third—City Woman's Championship Meet Begins November 1.

Mrs. Clarence Bradley is the new possessor of the Maier & Berkele woman's annual golf tournament cup by virtue of her 6-4 victory over Mrs. Helen Dargan Lowndes at Piedmont park Thursday morning in the finals of the cup tournament.

Mrs. Bradley for the past two years has been runner-up in the cup tourney, and Thursday morning saw the crowning of three years' aspiration.

She was never down to Mrs. Lowndes in the Thursday match. On the first green she gained a lead that was continually increased until the match ended on the fourteenth green. After winning the first hole, Mrs. Bradley halved the second with five. On the third, Mrs. Bradley increased her lead another hole with a par four, while Mrs. Lowndes was down in five.

Mrs. Bradley again was down in par on the fourth, also taking this hole. The fifth was halved in six, and Mrs. Bradley's three-hole lead was cut one hole when Mrs. Lowndes sank her putt for a par three to win the sixth.

The seventh was halved, while Mrs. Bradley won on the eighth to place her once more three up on her opponent. She sank a par three on the ninth, and they turned with Mrs. Bradley four up.

Her four-hole lead was again diminished slightly on the tenth, when Mrs. Lowndes sank a par three, but Mrs. Bradley took the next hole to become four up again.

The twelfth she halved. The thirteenth went to Mrs. Bradley with a par five, as did the fourteenth and final hole.

The Cards.

Mrs. Lowndes: 555 663 565—46

Mrs. Roy Burns was the second flight winner. She defeated Mrs. A. Guy Smith on the nineteenth green, one up, after the extra hole had been necessary to decide the match.

In the third flight finals, Mrs. Thomas Wilson won from Miss Cora Rice, 2 and 1.

Weiner Found

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 14.—(AP)—"Numbers keep buzzing through my head, 14-3-7, and the word 'shift.' It came to me all of a sudden that I had been playing football."

"You must know where it was, I had a 'C' for 'C'." Detectives who surrounded the speaker, a clean-cut youth of 18 who sat with his head in his hands, sobbing and vainly trying to recall his name, pulled from their files of missing men a bulletin with a photograph. It was a picture of the youth who sat before them in police headquarters here last night, and cleared up the disappearance of Joseph A. Wiener, Northwestern university student and freshman football player, who had been missing since October 7.

CUP WINNER

Mrs. Clarence Bradley, who placed herself in competition for the permanent possession of the Maier & Berkele cup by defeating Mrs. Helen Dargan Lowndes in the finals of the cup tourney at Piedmont park Thursday morning. The trophy, which Mrs. Bradley is shown holding, has been in competition for several years. Mrs. Bradley was also low medalist in the tournament qualifying round.

Change Looms

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 14.—(AP)—William Bingham, director of athletics at Harvard, announced tonight that the University of Indiana would appear on Harvard's 1927 football schedule. The game between the Crimson and the Western Conference eleven will be played at Cambridge on October 29.

At the same time, it was rumored in Harvard athletic circles that a temporary interruption of football relations between Harvard and Dartmouth was possible, due to the fact that the western team had been added to the schedule for next year. Officials declined to confirm or deny this report, on the ground that the 1927 schedule of games had not as yet been fully drawn up. The date allotted to Indiana on the 1927 schedule is that which Tufts fills this year.

BULLDOGS STAGE FINAL BEAR SESSION

BY MARCUS BRYANT.

Athens, Ga., October 14.—A final scrimmage for the Georgia Bulldogs was held today and a light session tomorrow tapers off activities for the clash with Furman's Purple Hurricane Saturday.

With the freshmen away, varsity teams spent an unusually busy afternoon. Coach Backman and the frosh squad left Athens this afternoon for Louisville, where the Mercer freshmen are playing tomorrow.

Three teams were used today though there was no outstanding work. Hot weather seems to have played a role in the listless showing made this week by the Bulldogs.

It was learned tonight that Chick Shiver, one of the numerous injured members of the Bulldog tribe, will probably be fit for service Saturday. Otherwise speculation reveals the list in the identical manner of casualties. Blackshear Smith's chances have faded into oblivion. All in all, the "House of Cripples" is much overstocked.

The Bulldogs against Yale presented a very good aerial defense, where time has been spent in no little measure this week. Of slight blocking propensities, the Bulldogs have received attention in this department this week. Against Yale, their blocking was of the slightest variety.

Furman is sending a large delegation of followers here for the game, which is next to the last stand of the year. It is made by the Bulldogs on home soil.

BILL TILDEN AND RICHARDS TIE FOR RANK

New York, October 14.—(AP)—Metropolitan critics already have taken up the unofficial task of ranking America's tennis stars for 1926 with a sharp revision of opinion as to whether William T. Tilden or Vincent Richards is entitled to No. 1 position.

Admitting that the rating problem has been complicated by the sweep of French racquets through the national championship event and the passing of Richards from the amateur fold, some observers contend that the season's record of the former Olympic champion entitles him to the top position.

Although Tilden's downfall in the title tournament was hastened by an injured knee, those commentators point out that Richards won three of his four matches against the dethroned king and that he was the only American player to reach the semi-final round. Other critics, however, feel that "Big Bill" should top the list for the seventh time.

A shake-up in the 1927 "first ten" lineup also was seen as a result of the rise of two young players, Alfred H. Chapin, Jr., of Springfield, Mass., and Edward C. Chandler, of California, the intercollegiate titleholder.

Critics see before them another problem in fixing the position of two veteran members of the "Big Four"—R. N. Williams and William M. Johnston. Neither reached the final round of a singles competition during the season.

N. C. STATERS ARE DEFEATED BY DAVIDSON

BY ERNEST MILTON.

Raleigh, N. C., October 14.—Dick Grey, sensational backfield man of the Davidson Wildcats, won a football game for the Presbyterians this afternoon when he drop-kicked a field goal early in the fourth quarter to defeat the North Carolina State Wolfpack, 3 to 0. It was the second time this season that Grey's toe has spelled defeat for opponents, and was the fourth successful three-point marker for him. This was the fifth win for the Wildcats for the 1926 season.

First downs: Davidson, 11; State, 6. State Techmen played an excellent brand of football, as compared to their weak exhibitions heretofore, but even at that threatened the Davidson team only in the fourth quarter when a vain attempt was made to tie the score through the dropkick route. On the other hand, the Davidson backs were able to smash through the line and avenge around end for long gains, marching into State territory many times.

Grey was undoubtedly the feature of the fray, for in addition to the honor that goes to him, he presented one of the best games of his career. Captain Wells, of the Wildcats, was a close second for honors, with several thrilling dashes around end and numerous twistings and turnings through the line.

INFANTRY GRID TEAM TO MEET MARINE SQUAD

Coach Alex Cunningham, with 25 football warriors of the 22nd Infantry team, left Fort McPherson Thursday night for Parris Island, S. C., where the 22nd Infantry will engage the strong Parris Island marine team Saturday.

This team is believed to be much stronger than the 22nd Infantry team based on the showing of the two teams against the North Georgia Aggies. However, Cunningham has been working hard and the team has shown rapid improvement in the past week and will go into the game in much better condition than they were during the last game with the North Carolina Aggies. The Marine game is looked upon as the big game on the Infantry schedule and the team has been pointing towards it since the start of the season.

After the Marine game the 22nd Infantry team will journey to Fort Moultrie, S. C., where they will meet the strong Eighth Infantry team in a game on Wednesday, October 20. That will mean two games in five days and Coach Cunningham is taking a big squad to provide against injuries in the Marine game which would tend to weaken the team against the Eighth Infantry.

Lieutenant Thackston, with the Clemson college football team in 1922, has recently joined the regiment and is making a splendid showing at end.

Flask Toters Change Sex.

This here column is supposed to be devoted to sports and alleged sports, but we witnessed something today on the streets of this fair city which we cannot fail to comment on though it be only remotely connected with sports.

The age-old usage of the male sex have been usurped by the female of the species one by one until the unfortunate male is loath to call his name his own—but the incident we witnessed Thursday was the last straw on the camel's back.

Here is a panorama of what happened: Two ultra-modern flappers standing near a corner in the downtown section looking upward at an airplane overhead. As the plane travels away to the northward the two young ladies turn to watch its progress. And then the awful secret was revealed. One of the young ladies was wearing a very natty plaid skirt and it was equipped with naught else but a hip pocket from which protruded the end of a handkerchief the same shade as the skirt.

Verily it was the last straw—we returned to the office to reflect on the decadence of the male, from which reflections we at last concluded that perhaps the advent of the feminine hip pocket may be of some use after all. The youthful escort may now rely upon his "date" to carry the family hip flask to the dance.

Techsters' Spirit High.

The Smithies of Tech High are to meet the Steele High bruisers, of Dayton, Ohio, this afternoon at Spiller's field and they will do so with a badly crippled squad, but though the bones of some players may be broken the spirit of the Smithies is not even bruised.

The student body is confident of victory and if spirit is a factor Tech's Ohioans will return northward tonight dejected. A factor in Tech's defeat was the loss of Charley Bardwell, the mainstay of the Smithie backfield, was on the sidelines for at least four or five weeks with a broken collarbone. Captain Moto Davis was on the field in practice but it is unlikely that he will be able to play the whole game because of an injured knee and ankle. "Heavy" Hammond, the noted field general of the Purple and Gold, will not be able to play because of strained ligaments in his ankle. Other casualties are also on the list, but still the Smithies are fighting and this is the big thing.

BIRDS LEAVE FOR MOCCASIN BATTLE TODAY

BY ALTON REDFERN.

The Stormy Petrels concluded the final hard workout—the last practice available to condition them for the important struggle against the Chattanooga Moccasins—Thursday afternoon on Hernance field, when Coach Robertson drove them through a lengthy drill. The practice was not halted until darkness intervened.

Two teams were kept busy in the signal drill. The varsity team and the one which more than likely will be the starting lineup Saturday against the "Noogans" was as follows: Hardin and Carroll, ends; MacLaughlin and Perkins, tackles; Guthrie and Cousins, guards, and Hutson, center. The first backfield was composed of Campbell at quarterback; White and Bell at the half-back positions, and Vaughn, fullback.

Walk Through Plays.

Part of the afternoon was spent in walking through plays. Both the first and second stringers participated in this also, Coach Robertson directing and explaining to the ones who did not know what to do. It is the custom of Coach Robertson to take some of his time each week in order to explain the plays, for when some of them forget the plays they don't work.

Outside of John Goldsmith, varsity right tackle, who was injured in the Howard game, the Petrels are in excellent physical trim for the Moccasins. MacLaughlin will be the choice of Coach Robertson to fill the shoes of Goldsmith Saturday. Goldsmith will be on hand for use, but as yet has not entirely recovered.

Defense Worry.

The chief worry of Coach Robertson is that of his defense. During the first part of this week all of his time was given to this phase of the game. Chattanooga using the intricate Notre Dame formations has always been a menace to the Petrels, for the line of attack can be easily changed or varied. If the Birds can stop the hard charging Chattanooga backs and other victory will be won, for appar-

TEXAS WANTED TO BE ADMITTED TO THE

THE TEXAS QUESTION BECAME AN IMPOR-

HENRY CLAY, THE WHIG CANDIDATE, TRIED TO EVADE THE QUESTION.

THE DEMOCRATS ADOPTED "THE RE-OCUP-

Miss Coleman and Mr. Allen Wed At Druid Hills Church Ceremony

A brilliant social event of Thursday evening was the marriage of Miss Mildred Coleman and Percy Dexter Allen, taking place at 8:30 o'clock at the Druid Hills Methodist church. Dr. J. Wiley Quillian, pastor, performed the ceremony.

The church was artistically decorated. The choir loft was banked with palms and foliage plants. The pipes of the organ were covered with southern smilax and garlands of smilax hung from the balcony to the choir loft. Cathedral candlesticks, holding single burning tapers, were artistically arranged among the foliage of palms. Behind the chancel rail were four cathedral candlesticks, each holding three burning tapers, and the chancel rail was garlanded with southern smilax. Next to the choir were four miniature trees of Columbia roses. The seats for the families were marked with clusters of roses.

Nuptial Music.

Preceding the ceremony Miss Ethel Beyer rendered on the organ "Nocturne" from "Mid-Summer Night's Dream," "Romance," by Bonnet, "Wedding Song," by Harriet Ware, and "Santita la Minuet," by Meule. Floyd Jennings, tenor, sang "Today," by Carrie Jacobs Bond.

The bride entered with her father to the strains of the wedding march from "Lohengrin" and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Addison Leavens Martin. During the ceremony "Trauerlied" was played softly on the organ by Miss Beyer and the benediction ended with a solo, "O Perfect Song," by Floyd Jennings.

Lovely Bride.

The bride was beautifully gowned in white satin and her veil, an imported creation of Brussels lace, was fastened to her head. Her bouquet was of white roses and valley lilies, showered with valley lilies.

Miss Agnes Coleman was her sister's maid of honor and wore blue georgette and carried a bouquet of Pernet roses corresponding to her gown. Mrs. R. H. Smith, another sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Her gown was of pink georgette and her flowers were a shower bouquet of pink roses tied with pink ribbon. The bridesmaids were Misses Gladys Holbrook, Annie Johnson, Ethel Pfeiffer and Mrs. R. G. Turner. Their gowns were of rainbow shades of georgette and they carried shower bouquets of roses corresponding in tone with their costumes.

Informal Reception.

Following the ceremony the bridal party and intimate friends were entertained at a reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Coleman, at 726 Penn avenue. Mrs. Allen is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Coleman, and is a member of an old and distinguished family of this city and state. She attended school at the North Avenue Presbyterian school, Atlanta, finishing her education at Southern Methodist university, Dallas, Texas, where she

W. Burke, 330 West North Main street in College Park, in the presence of the family and intimate friends.

The bride's best man was J. W. Burke, of Columbus, Georgia, who performed the ceremony. The home was beautifully decorated for the occasion. The lovely improvised altar before which the ceremony was performed was made of ferns and smilax, with burning candles in the rear. Floor baskets of white roses were placed on each end of the altar.

When Stephen Philibosian, president of this big mercantile house, set about to get an organization he was determined to employ men who were not only equipped with a knowledge of the business, but men of long experience and whose personality could be nothing but pleasing to the customer's.

Gradually he has built up an organization unsurpassed in the South. His men are alive to every opportunity to give good service and they have been a great factor in developing the ever-growing circle of friends of this institution.

"We are working for volume of sales," said Mr. Philibosian, in speaking of his low prices. "It would astonish the average buyer to know really how little profit we get on the individual piece of merchandise, but one that once the public learns that one can buy here cheaper than elsewhere the volume of our business will compensate for the quality merchandise we are now offering at such low figures." Fur-Trimmed Coats $15

Winter coats with fur trimming... just $15! You think it's impossible. But today Lewis' is proving to you that it isn't. And they're attractive coats, too, as you'll see for yourself at your first glance!

Sports Styles or Plain Coatings

All of them have fur collars, and some of them even have fur cuffs! Most of them are sports coats in large plaid effects or mixtures. These are in reds, browns, grays and blues. The coats in solid colors are in navy blue, tan, rust, brown and Valencia. Most of them are styled in slender, straight lines, but some of them are belted. Mighty, mighty good-looking coats, and every woman who comes to see them cannot help but be delighted with their unexpected smartness and quality.
